

Kender Energy Considers Dual Listing on a European Exchange

GENEVA, Oct 26, 2009 (MARKETWIRE via COMTEX) -- Kender Energy Inc. (PINKSHEETS: KNDR) today announced that it is reviewing the dual listing of its shares on a European Exchange.

According to the company, the London AIM, the EURONEXT and the Deutsche Boerse are being considered for the dual listings. Specifically the criteria the company is looking for is the ease of entry, cost, and liquidity of each exchange. All factors are being considered in making the final decision.

"The European listing will enable the company to expand its shareholder base as well as provide the company with additional exposure to environmentally friendly investment funds located in Europe," said Sean Kelly, President and CEO of Kender Energy Inc. "We have clearly identified our needs as it pertains to our European exchange and we expect to select the exchange in the coming weeks," further added Mr. Kelly.

About Kender Energy Inc.:

Kender Energy Inc. is a development phase company active in the field of solar energy. Its present prototypes of solar panels are being developed into a full-scale solar energy production system. The particularity of the Kender solar panel system and technology is to allow, via a closed circuit of gas (usually helium), to create a heat exchange with the sunlight and the air from the environment. The exchange generates the spinning of the helium gas in the closed circuit, propelling a turbine, which produces electricity in a 100% clean and renewable process. The system's main advantages are that it is efficient, cheap in production, and modular. The company is based near Geneva, Switzerland. Its Website is www.kendersolar.com.
